GENTLEMEN:—We beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your petition of July Sth., 1899, complaining of the unfatisfactory facilities furnished to your city for travel to the eastern cities, particularly with regard to sleeping car accommodations.

We fully recognize the importance of your city, and will be very glad to do all we consistently can for you. We have looked into the matter, thoroughly, however, and find that we cannot increase your facilities on the present stream which drowned nine people, by yesterday's rain was not half so severe It will be remembered that in the former lood one of the drowned was John Hohmann. His widow and three childer the still lived in the same place, the house which was then so badly damaged that having been repaired. It adjoined the house in which the Steezel tamily had so sad an experience at the time of the former flood. Last evening the run teams out strongly egain. Mindful of their former experience, Mrs. Hohman and her children were alarmed when they saw the waters swirling about on all sides of their house. They undertook to get to a safe place, but all were swept away by the torrent. passenger train mileage, which we d not now feel justified in doing, especiall as our records show an average of only about three passengers per day from Wheeling for points east of Harrisburg We will bear the matter in mind, and when the fall change of schedule is made we will be very glad to do better if we can.

Trusting that you will appreciate our inability to do anything now, and our desire to have all the business from Wheeling we can secure, we are Very truly yours, Joseph Wood,

General Manager.

The Wheeling merchants who signed the petition think this a rather weak mawer. They think that if the facilities were increased perhaps the records might show a larger number of passengers from Wheeling per day, as many who are now induced by superior facili ties to use the Baltimore & Ohio road might prefer the Pennsylvania lines if the facilities were as good. It is also an important fact that most of the Wheeling business men who go east use mileage books to Pittsburgh, and there buy tickets to their destination. From all the towns in the vicinity, also, a great many passengers daily go to Pittsburgh and there buy tickets for Eastern cities. The Wheeling business men still maintain that the Pennsylvania Company's policy is short-sighted, and not as liberal as this community deserves. as this community deserves, BELLAIRE.
